

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction: Epistemology and its colonies—On the cultural conditioning of cognition	xiii
I CHINESE PHILOSOPHY AND CHINESE EPISTEMOLOGY—UNCOVERING A HIDDEN RELATIONSHIP
1. Epistemology in traditional Chinese thought—General characteristics	2
2. Specific features of classical Chinese epistemology	9
2.1 Basic categories: From names (ming 名) and actualities (shi 實) to knowledge (zhi 知) and action (xing 行)	10
2.2 Orthodox Confucianism and the early Moist School	12
2.3 Neglecting linguistic positivism: From Laozi to Xunzi	15
2.4 Analytical approaches: The Nomenalist and the Neo-Moist schools	18
2.5 Zhuangzi's egalitarian epistemology	23
3. Later conceptual developments	29
3.1 Subjective and objective knowledge	29
3.2 Ultimate knowledge (zhizhi 致知) and the exploration (gewu 格物) of things	31
3.3 The concept li 理 as the main principle of comprehension	32
3.4 The split in Neo-Confucianism during the Ming dynasty (1368–1644)	35
II THE DECLINE OF TRADITION—DESPOTISM AND THE ESCAPE INTO INWARDNESS
4. The School of Mind (Xinxue 心學)	40
4.1 In the footsteps of Lu Jiuyuan 陸九淵 (1139–1193)	41

5. Wang Shouren 王守仁 (Wang Yangming 王陽明, 1472–1529)	43
5.1 Life and work	43
5.2 Theory of knowledge	44
6. Later developments in the School of Mind: Gradualist epistemology (xiushen 修身) and the epistemology of instant enlightenment (ligen 利根)	50
7. The fusion of Confucianism and Chan Buddhism: Qian Dehong 錢德洪 (1496–1574) and Wang Ji 王畿 (1498–1583)	53
8. The Folk Confucian and the Chan Buddhist enfant terrible: Wang Gen 王艮 (1483–1540) and Li Zhi 李贄 (1527–1602)	58
9. The materialistic opposition of the Academy of the Eastern Forest (東林書院)	66
10. Gu Xiancheng 顧憲成 (1550–1612) and Gao Panlong 高攀龍 (1562–1626)	69
11. The rise of the last dynasty (Qing 1644–1911) and reactions against Manchurian domination	74
12. Materialist epistemology of the nationalist Wang Fuzhi 王夫之 (1619–1692)	77
12.1 Life and political background	78
12.2 Ontological suppositions	80
12.3 Methods of comprehension	83
12.4 The subject (neng 能) and object (suo 所) of cognition	87
12.5 Knowledge (zhi 知) and action (xing 行)	89
13. New methodologies and the first introduction of Western thought	92
14. The progressivism of Confucian fundamentalism: The School of Practical Learning (Xizhai 習齋) or the School of the Adherents of the Han Dynasty (漢學派)	96
15. The pragmatism of recognition: Yan Yuan 顏元 (1635–1704) and Li Gong 李塉 (1659–1746)	98
16. The conception of reality through its illumination: Dai Zhen 戴震 (1724–1777)	103

- 16.1 Life and general contribution of Dai Zhen's work 103
 16.2 The further development of new methodological approaches 104
 16.3 External reality and mind 107
 16.4 Interpretations of traditional epistemological concepts 108
 16.5 The illumination (zhao 照) of reality as the basis of recognition 111

III CHINESE MODERNITY—THE ERA OF SPIRITUAL AND POLITICAL TRANSITIONS

17. Toward modernity: From the Opium Wars (Yapian zhanzheng 鴉片戰爭) to the end of the monarchy (1840–1911) 116
 17.1 The Hundred Days' Reform (Bairi weixin 百日維新): Kang Youwei 康有為 (1858–1927), Liang Qichao 梁啟超 (1873–1929) and Tan Sitong 譚嗣同 (1865–1898) 118
 17.2 Political theories 119
 17.3 Evolution and the idea of progress 124
 17.4 Epistemology 127
 17.5 The triumph of reason in knowledge and beauty: Yan Fu 嚴復 (1854–1921) and Wang Guowei 王國維 (1877–1927) 134
18. The period of the First (1912–1949) and the Second Republic (from 1949 to the present) 139
19. The main philosophical currents in the twentieth century and their chief representatives 143
 19.1 The enlightenment of the new pragmatism: Hu Shi 胡適 (1891–1962) 148
 19.2 The “Communist” renewal of Confucianism: Feng Youlan 馮友蘭 (1895–1990) 153
 19.3 The challenges of dialectical materialism: Zhang Dainian 張岱年 (1909–2004) 165
 19.4 Post-Marxist aesthetics: Li Zehou 李澤厚 (1930–) 183
 19.5 Modern Confucianism (Xinruxue 新儒學) in Taiwan: Mou Zongsan 牟宗三 (1909–1995) 194
20. New approaches in modern Chinese epistemology: Xiong Shili (1885–1968) and the synthesis of qualitative (xingzhi 性智) and quantitative (liangzhi 量智) understanding 208

- 20.1 The dynamics of self-education: From Buddhism to Modern Confucianism 209
- 20.2 The synthesis of essence (ti 體) and function (yong 用) 212
- 20.3 From habituated and original mind (xixin 習心, benxin 本心) to quantitative and qualitative understanding (liangzhi 量智, xingzhi 性智) 215
- 20.4 Science and intuition 222
- 20.5 Return to the dialectics of ethics and epistemology: The inner sage and the external ruler (neisheng waiwang 內聖外王) 225
21. Zhang Dongsun's 張東蓀 (1886–1973) plural epistemology (duoyuan renshilun 多元認識論) 227
- 21.1 The path taken by an opponent and its tragic conclusion 228
- 21.2 The critique of dialectical materialism 229
- 21.3 Panstructuralism (Fanjiagouzhuoyi 泛架構主義) 232
- 21.4 Plurality of cognition 240
- 21.5 Language and logic: Problems of comprehension and transmission 254
- 21.6 The universality and cultural conditionality of epistemology 258
22. Epistemology through the lens of the relation between Dao and the truth: Jin Yuelin 金岳霖 (1895–1984) 263
- 22.1 Life and work: Influences and fields 264
- 22.2 The Way (dao), potential (neng 能) and form (shi 式) 265
- 22.3 The theory of knowledge 270
23. The epistemology of Chinese “Marxism”: Feng Qi's (馮契, 1915–1995) transformation of knowledge into wisdom 275
- 23.1 Life and work 275
- 23.2 The meaning of “expanded epistemology” (guangyi renshilun 廣義認識論) 279
- 23.3 The multilayered order of the external world and the method of dialectical logic 284
- 23.4 The recognition and cultivation of a free personality 290
- 23.5 Cognitive distinctions and the new holism of wisdom 292
24. Traditional epistemology as a bridge to new ideologies: From He Lin 賀麟 (1902–1992) to Sun Yat-sen 孫逸仙 (1866–1925) and Mao Zedong 毛澤東 (1893–1976) 297

25. Searching for new pathways to the third millennium: Xia Zhentao 夏甄陶 (1934), Hu Jun 胡軍 (1951) and Zhang Yaonan 張耀南 (1963)	299
26. Contemporary Chinese epistemology: Between old and new understandings	305
26.1 Linking ontology and epistemology	306
26.2 Syntheses of methods and disciplines	308
26.3 Relation as the core of cognition	313
Notes	319
Bibliography	331
Index	351